

Consideration of the dedication of the Chinquapin Ridge Nature Preserve in Marion County

The proposed Nature Preserve is a 119.93 acre property in the northeast corner of the Fort Harrison State Park within Marion County. This nature preserve protects the stream corridor of the Fall Creek Valley and an important block of forested habitat in Indiana's Central Till Plain.

This Nature Preserve consists of topography that has heavily dissected slopes and ravine forests along with the floodplains of Fall Creek and its confluence with Indian Creek. These community types along with their expected component flora and fauna contain many species that are area-sensitive forest interior plants and animals dependent upon large, unfragmented forest ecosystems.

Noteworthy animal species found in this Nature Preserve include:

This site protects an active mixed-egret rookery, including both Great Egrets and Great Blue Herons. The Broad-winged Hawk and the Cerulean Warbler also inhabit this preserve. The Federally Endangered Indiana Bat, Myotis sodalis, has been documented onsite, suggesting the potential for a maternity colony within the park boundaries. There are also unconfirmed sightings of the Bobcat, Lynx rufus, within the potential habitat. The riparian areas are home to two species of State Endangered mussel: the Snuffbox, Northern Riffleshell; and the mussel of State Special Concern, the Ellipse.

Noteworthy plant species found in this Nature Preserve include the State Watch Listed Chelone oblique var. speciosa or the Rose Turtlehead.

This tract is owned and managed by the Department of Natural Resources and the Division of State Parks and Reservoirs.

The Division of Nature Preserves and the Division of State Parks and Reservoirs recommend dedication of this site as a State Nature Preserve.
